525 MILES
OF THE
UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD
Running West from Omaha
ACROSS THE CONTINENT, ARE NOW COMPLETED.

THIS BRINGS THE LINE TO THE EASTERN BASE of the Rocky Mountains, and it is expected that the track will be laid thirty miles further, to Evans Pass, the highest point on the road, by January. The maximum grade from the foot of the mountains to the summit is but eighty feet to the mile, while that of many eastern roads is over one hundred. Work in the rock-cuttings on the western slope will continue through the winter, and there is now no reason to doubt that the entire grand line to the Pacific will be open for business in 1870.

The means provided for the construction of this Great National Work are ample. The United States grants its Six Per Cent. Bonds at the rate of from $16,000 to $48,000 per mile, for which it takes a second lien as security, and receives payment to a large if not to the full extent of its claim in services. These bonds are issued as each twenty mile section is finished, and after it has been examined by the United States Commissioners and pronounced to be in all respects a first class road, thoroughly supplied with depots, repair shops, stations, and all the necessary rolling stock and other equipments.

The United States also makes a donation of 12,800 acres of land to the mile, which will be a source of large revenue to the Company. Much of this land in the Platte Valley is among the most fertile in the world, and other large portions are covered with heavy pine forests and abound in coal of the best quality.

The Company is also authorized to issue its own First Mortgage Bonds to an amount equal to the issue of the Government and no more. Hon. E. D. Morgan and Hon. Oakes Ames are Trustees for the Bondholders, and deliver the bonds to the Company only as the work progresses, so that they always represent an actual and productive value.

The authorized capital of the Company is One Hundred Million Dollars, of which over five millions have been paid in upon the work already done

EARNINGS OF THE COMPANY.

At present, the profits of the Company are derived only from its local traffic, but this is already much more than sufficient to pay the interest on all the Bonds the Company can issue, if not another mile were built. It is not doubted that when the road is completed the through traffic of the only line connecting the Atlantic and Pacific States will be large beyond precedent, and, as there will be no competition, it can always be done at profitable rates.

It will be noticed that the Union Pacific Railroad is, in fact, a Government Work, built under the supervision of Government officers, and to a large extent with Government Money, and that its bonds are issue under Government direction. It is believed that no similar security is so carefully guarded, and certainly no other is based upon a larger or more valuable property. As the Company's are offered for the present at 95 CENTS ON THE DOLLAR, IN U. S. CURRENCY, they are the cheapest security in the market, being more than 15 per cent. lower than U. S. Stocks. They pay

SIX PER CENT. IN GOLD,

or over NINE PER CENT. upon the investment. Subscriptions will be received in Portland by and by the Company's advertised Agents throughout the United States. Remittances should be made in drafts or other funds par in New York, and the bonds will be sent free of charge by return express.

A NEW PAMPHLET AND MAP, showing the Progress of the Work, Resources for Construction, and Value of Bonds, may be obtained at the Company's Offices or of its advertised Agents, or will be sent free on application.

The Surrender of Lee.

A THRILLING NARRATIVE BY MAJOR-GENERAL CHAMBERLAIN.

We give below General Chamberlain's (now Governor of Maine) thrilling narrative of the incidents which occurred when the final blow was given to the greatest rebellion the world ever witnessed and Lee surrendered his many thousands to the conquering forces under Grant, all of which the narrator "saw and part of which he was." He made this subject the subject of a recent lecture which he delivered at Portland, Maine:

The last blow, he said, had been struck, left, right and center. Grant's last plan of the campaign had reached a triumphant close. He had "bought it out on this line" to the end. That plan was this: A marked movement was to be made by Sheridan's cavalry, supported by two corps of infantry, on the enemy's right. If the enemy was taken unawares his communication would be cut off; but if he apprehended the movement and weakened his line to meet it, our troops were ready to seize the moment and carry his works and the town. When, on the evening before, we silently prepared to break camp, every officer felt that whatever might befall him the morrow would bring events that would thrill the country with joy. The enemy fell on both horns of the dilemma. He moved too late, and too early; too late to meet our movements on his right, and to soon to save his front. The blows fell swift, strong and simultaneous on his right, then on his center, and finally on his left, which doubled up and fled in confusion on the road toward Richmond, at last. The Southside Railroad was cut, Petersburg was ours, the fall of Richmond inevitable and Virginia itself no longer tenable for the enemy. Then commenced the rout. Lee struck west towards Danville, endeavoring to reach the railroad before our advance, effect a junction with Johnson, and strike an overpowering blow against Sherman.

The result was a campaign of twelve days, four days of chase, sharp, hard fighting, four days of running fight, marching all night and skirmishing all day, and four days pursuit—racing, exciting, cruel almost to our men.

It was my fortune to be on the extreme left, which in the pursuit became the extreme advance, and I am therefore able to relate many things which did not fall under the observation of the reporters. I propose to relate, in simple manner, the circumstances of Lee's surrender.

The rebels sought to escape in the direction of Danville. They pushed along the roads parallel to the Southside Railroad and the Appomattox, only to meet our advance and be each time driven back with a new disaster. Yet they stretched on with increasing energy, like the fire encompassed worm on the forestick recoiling from the fire and wearing out its life in struggles to save it. Central Virginia became a great prison yard, of which that Southside Railroad was the dead line. Higher and higher up the river stretched the cruel armies. Lee found it a hard road to travel, with the Army of the Potomac on his back, the Army of the James in his rear and Sheridan on his front. We marched with skirmishers thrown out. At first only an occasional dead man or an empty haversack marked the track of the enemy's flight. Anon the ground became low, with ruts axle deep, and here were abandoned guns, with trembling mules and the queer country carts of the inhabitants fleeing before the Yankees as if they were the scourge of God. Here, too, were horses whose owners couldn't stop to ride! We reached a creek strewn with fragments and the drowned. On its banks were still strange vehicles, white men even clamoring to be colored—a fact they never boasted of before! [Laughter.] The vehicles were crowded together until they could neither come nor go. Among them sat the coming man himself, still cheerful, hopeful, trusting to luck, or waiting patiently for a dispensation from on high! The pursuit was checked but for a time. A bridge was built. Officers dashed into the stream breast high, some tumbling into deep holes and coming out with a muddy reluctant alacrity. Some of the men wanted to take off their shoes and stockings and stop to dress again on the other side—but that wouldn't do.

The pursuit must not flag, so officers coax, scold, scowl, and some who have scruples against affirming do the other thing. [Laughter.] But we are over the creek, we climb the hill; the way is narrow and choked with the enemy's fragments. There are loaded percussion shells, caissons on fire, the flames near the fuse. There is no loitering in running that gauntlet! Better endure wet clothes a little longer than stay here to be blown high and dry. We have orders to destroy all military material, so we set fire to forage wagons, throw ammunition into the streams and chop the gun carriages. Suddenly the musketry of the rebel's rear guard is heard, the rebel hat the flag is seen, and the artillery opens with shot and shell. A regiment is thrown forward, the brigade follows, the swell of musketry is short and sharp, and silence soon follows. We have taken two or three hundred prisoners. Such is the daily pursuit, ever full of excitement. It is a new experience for the Army of the Potomac—that army which had done more than any other, and yet had been taunted with doing nothing; which so often after a three days' march, had fallen back because it was the Army of the Potomac and must not uncover Washington; so often running neck and neck with the enemy along the Blue Ridge; so often ordered to withdraw, in bitterness of heart from hights they had held; so many times crossing rivers in the face and in spite of the foe—a thing rarely done—so often making the hights beyond immortal, only to recross, without blame to themselves; suffering losses until decimation became five times too tame a term to express their losses—the Army of Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, and Spottsylvania, a wonderful old army, schooled in passive courage, ever cheerful and ready to try again. This wild pursuit was a new business to them. Now their active and passive virtues had both come to harvest.

It is the last night of the pursuit. The Army of the James is in front. Not being so accustomed to marching they impede our progress. The men are impatient until at last they turn off and give us the road. It is black midnight when we turn into the woods and lie down in our wet clothes, supperless, too chilled to sleep, and when at last sleep comes, there is word from Sheridan. He had cut the enemy's lines, and if the infantry is pushed on, great results will be achieved in the morning. We spring to answer the call as best we can. The bugle calls to colors, with one foot in the stirrup we snatch a mouthful of half cooked meat and a cup of cold coffee, and ride on to the head of the column. We are on the chase once more—and for the last time! If we had dreamed of it then how quickly we should have awakened to the bugle call! The road is now free, we push on past Appomattox station, hungry, cross, foot-sore and just in the mood for a fight! Presently we hear the boom of guns, the cracking of carbines, and the heavier roll of the infantry's musketry. Sheridan is across the enemy's line of retreat, gallantly holding him at bay.

We push on to his support—the rebels are pressing him hard. Ayres, the son of battle, [applause for General Ayres, who is present in the audience], double quicks to the front and throws forward his Spencer rifles. We catch sight of Sheridan's pennon and the smoke of battle. Beneath it is that calm, impetuous leader, on the black steed which he rode in the battles of the Shenandoah. In full view, up the slope, we see his cavalry bravely contending with Stonewall Jackson's old corps. Whithout a halt we wheel into double line, pass Sheridan and dash upon the prey. Stonewall's corps find they have other enemies to contend with, and know that the game is up—the hope of breaking through the cavalry is lost. They give way and fall back on their batteries. It is a glorious hour! Every arm of the service in full play—on the one side rolling sullenly back, on the other swelling triumphantly on! The cavalry, now discouraged, close around to the right and complete envelloping destruction. Unless the enemy can break through, nothing can save them. The rebel batteries, thrown in the rear, fall back to the town. Appomattox Court House. We press on. General Ord orders a halt at the foot of the slope, but we prefer to obey Sheridan's order, and push on to the crest, expecting to be swept by the enemy's fire.

The night is gained and in full view is the enemy, a night to repay years of toil and blood. Encompassed in the valley lies the remnant of the great Army of Northern Virginia—a vast amphitheatre, stretching miles across, the infantry on the opposite slopes, the artillery and cavalry in confusion, without attempting the offensive or defensive. In the valley of the Appomattox, now a rivulet which you may step over, and along its edges in a mad rude of soldiers and citizens, horses and mules, in every direction, all in confusion. All this in full sight of the crest on which we stood. The die is cast. The light batteries are brought up, the cavalry close in on the fated foe, and with a joy such as the Crusaders felt when they caught sight of the Holy City, we pressed forward to the consummation. A single field piece gives us an expiring welcome as we dash down the steep. Our skirmishers are already in town—they are fighting in the same street. An orderly dashes up with four sabres captured on the left, a brigade surrenders to an aide de camp. Now two horsemen approach from the right with a flag of truce. "General Longstreet desires a cessation of the conflict until he can learn from Gen. Lee the terms of surrender." Did I hear aright? This exceeds my authority, and the officer is referred to my commander on the left.

Just as a cannon shot strikes one of my officers through the heart, and he falls the last victim of the war, an order comes to cease firing and halt! Halt! it is beyond human power to stop the men who have endured so much to bring about that hour. They have seen the flag of truce, and the more the captains cry halt, the more they push forward frantic with surprise. "Your legs have done it, boys," cries the gray-haired General Ord, riding by, but the men remember the blood they have shed and shake their heads at the compliment. All is now quiet. Six or seven Generals from both sides meet between the skirmish lines to talk the matter over. Grant and Lee have not yet come up. On the rebel side there are Gordon, the bravest of the brave, and Longstreet, looking hearty and earnworn. One West Pointer greets another whom he has been fighting for four years. "How goes it, Billy?" "Bad, Charley, bad; have you got any whiskey?" Sheridan is not cheerful about the cessation of the fight. He suspects it is only a ruse to gain time. But the rebel Generals assure him it is not so—the game is up. We compare notes. One says if he had done this or done that, the result would have been different. Another rebel offers remarks: "You did right not to attack us at Williamsport, for we should have whipped you, but if you had followed us up at Gettysburg I cannot say what might have been the result."

Presently there is firing on the road. Gen. Gordon is vexed, saying he ordered a cessation of the fight, but Sheridan, with an expletive, said: "Let 'm fight, I know what they are about." No answer coming from Lee, we are about to resume hostilities, when Grant and Lee ride up—Grant with his inevitable sugar-loaf hat, open coat, muddy boots, and hands in his pockets; Lee looking venerable and impressive, apparently dressed for the occasion in a new suit of gray, with a new sword by his side. They draw apart. Soon the answer comes—the end of all the strife—Lee surrenders! Oh, the skies above the Appomattox must be tough that they were not burst by the uproar of exultation that ensued—kept up all night, chiefly on the rebel side. Our men, after expressing their feelings, went to sleep, but the rebels seemed to have reliefs to keep up the shouting all night. Some said they were cheering Lee, but the truth was they were sick of fighting. Rebels, they had a supper—a rarity with them—for we had divided with them, and afterwards went hungry ourselves.

So ended that night of April, 1865, Palm Sunday, and to us who fall asleep it came like that other Palm Sunday, when the disciples made ready for the King, and called, "Peace on earth and in heaven, and glory to God in the highest."

In the morning the rebels thronged our camp, and commenced a busy traffic for tobacco, knives, pipes, bread, hats, shoes, etc. Our command being on the

TUESDAY MORNING MARCH 24 1868

The Doctrines of the Rebellion Reaffirmed

The "Democratic platform contains the substance of all the party cries which have for years characterized that party It is the platform which was framed it took care that the principles should not be elaborately stated nevertheless they are insisted with pertinacity that the great dogma of the principles of secession and national integration should not be omitted In these respects it is easy to discern every feature of the heresies which plunged the South into rebellion and made Northern Copperheads the allies of Southern rebels before and during the contest Passing by the first resolution which practically reaffirms the views held by the rebel seceders and justifies the course of Buchanan when he refused to take measures to save the country from dissolution we find in the second resolve a direct utterance of the dogma out of which all the troubles of the country have grown—the dogma that the powers of the General Government are derived from the States, and by implication that the ultimate power of judging of the constitutional extent of the authority of the Government of the Union is lodged with the States which may lawfully decide for themselves and each State for itself whether the act of the General Government in a given case transcends its power This is in substance and meaning, as well as in the "Democratic" platform It is the doctrine which was stated in these words by Col. Kelly, when a candidate for Congress before the people of Oregon in 1864 The States met the Government, and they can unmake it It is the doctrine which Webster combatted when it was put forth by Hayne and the South Carolina nullifiers in 1830 It is the doctrine which produced the rebellion, and which the country was compelled to meet on the battle field in a bloody four years war This Government is indeed one of "limited powers, but those powers were not granted by the States It is admitted that the powers of the General Government are thus derived, the natural complement of the proposition or argument is that they may be resumed whenever the pleasure of the States to resume On this theory the rebels acted while Northern Democrats looked on with approval The national doctrine which it was the object of the war to uphold is that the Constitution of the United States emanates immediately from the people, that it is the supreme law, and that it is not the creature of the States The end for which this Constitution was formed was to make a government which should not be the sport of State discretion and State contumacy The people have witnessed the direful results of this State supremacy doctrine and it is the madness in them to trust the helm of State to a party which seeks to re-establish principles so fruitful of baleful consequences At a time like this, when the wounds inflicted by the war are still rankling, for a political party to affiliate with the pernicious dogmas which precipitated the country into the struggle!

Several of the delegates elected by the Kentucky Copperhead Convention to the National Copperhead Convention, have been either officers of the Rebel Congress, or served in the rebel army Among the members may be found the following

Wm B Machen delegate from the first district was a member of the rebel congress

Lucius Desha, one of the delegates at large, was Brigadier General in the rebel service

Thos Green, one of the alternates was a member of the rebel congress, Lucius Desha, from the Sixth District served in the rebel army as Captain Ed Turner delegate from the Eighth District, also served in the rebel army

The Grant County Union Convention put up a patriotic Congressional and District nomination about right, in one of their resolutions as follows

Resolved, That we recognize in the names presented by the Copperhead convention at Portland the controlling and predominance of the rebel element in the organization of every so called "War Democrat" by placing on their ticket which reminds us of the fact that we are again fighting the old adversary in another campaign, and illustrates the political axiom that a Democrat will no more change his politics than the Ethiopian can change his skin, or the leopard his spots.

A few evenings since, when the stage from Eugene City reached Albany was about to start and the passengers were ordered to get aboard, a "dead drunk" Democrat wanted an outside seat with the driver but was told that this seat was engaged and was directed to take a seat inside There being two vacant seats inside the D D individual swore that he was a good Democrat (a fact which was tolerably self evident) and that he was not going to ride inside with "niggers" and stopped in Albany for the next stage The two Chinamen had a narrow escape

A Democratic paper in Michigan threatens Gen Grant with assassination, in case Congress puts the work of reconstruction in his hands It says "The Radicals tell us that they are sending Grant to the South as a new Caesar Having crossed the Rubicon the Radicals should not forget to remind their Cæsar that he may find in the South a Pompey's pillar, at whose base his blood may gurgle out as he cries, et tu Brute!

The Eugene Journal says that before the Democratic delegates left that city a week ago last Saturday morning, they all congregated at Bas Lee's, took some Nashyan consolation, and then went to the Orpheum C Kerr, would say "at right about face" It was a noticeable fact that for a whole day afterward, there was not a single liquor shop open in the city What was the use when their customers had all gone?

Rev. P. S. Knight is delivering at Salem a series of lectures on the subject of the Mosaic account of the Creation The Unionist says he has "dealt with the vast subject which he has had under consideration in a masterly manner as has appeared from the large and enthusiastic audiences which have uniformly attended to hear him"

The unreconstructed rebel who does the scribbling for the Eugene Guard is talking about the prospect of "brute force" being employed against the "nigger" in Congress He may well pray for the "brute force" to begin—otherwise he may never get a job to keep him from starving

The Carson Appeal says that during several days of the late cold snap the thermometer stood at 16° below zero at that place and thinks it very foolish in Secretary Seward to purchase Walrussia when Nevada can furnish such icebergish weather

The Aurora Brass Band has been engaged to furnish music at the Sam Corson Convention It is not expected, however, that they will perform Dixie or the Germans of the Aurora Colony don't know the first, or any other note of that favorite Democratic air

The State Journal says the Democratic party is going to decay in Douglas county Three of the species have been sent to the penitentiary and six others have run off to avoid arrest

Lieut W I Hendricken appointed to the army from Oregon has been appointed to a 1st Lieutenancy, and assigned to Co F, 1st U S Cavalry, at Camp Harney.

LEADER FROM GRANT COUNTY.

CANYON CITY, March 16

EDITOR OREGONIAN

A word from Grant may not be without interest We are shut off from the outside world by mountains snow and bad roads, but like all mortals, we have our local excitements, troubles and tribulations The weather has been changeable—snowing almost every day this month, with high winds The miners are idle yet, the mining season not having set in, and the ground is frozen too hard for farmers to commence spring plowing In fact, no one is busy, and having plenty of idle time we turn our attention to

POLITICS

Our Union Republican County Convention met in Canyon City, pursuant to the call of the State Central Committee, and elected as delegates to the State Convention the following persons J H. Stahl, D B Rhinehart James Blake, F Adams, J W Whalley and B Whitten and then passed a resolution declaring for Grant for President after which the Convention adjourned with three rousing cheers for Grant and the success of the Union party After adjournment, the meeting was called to order by F Adams, who nominated J W Whalley for Chairman and D B Rhinehart for Secretary

Mr F Adams was introduced, after the object of the meeting had been stated by the Chairman and after a few brief and pointed remarks, introduced a Constitution for a Grant Club, which was adopted as read

After all present had signed the Constitution including several Democrats who boldly renounced the Copperhead heresy and declared for the Union party and principles permanent officers were elected, when the Club agreed to meet at 7 o clock

At 7 o clock the house was crowded and a great many were unable to obtain admission The Club was addressed by B Whitten and F Adams who went into the county financial administration during the last two years, showing fraud and official corruption almost beyond parallel the most of which charges were admitted by the Democrats in my hearing The speakers cited the county records as proof, and stated that where the county record failed they had oral proof

Mr Whalley, in a forcible speech reviewed in a masterly manner the national policy of both parties handling roughly the new doctrine of paying off the national debt in greenbacks bringing forth convincing proofs to show the utter fallacy of the position The most intense enthusiasm prevailed throughout the entire meeting The Club roll was opened and about one hundred signed the list, when the meeting adjourned with cheer after cheer Thus opens the coming campaign in Grant county, and right here I will say that seven or eight men who have been life long Democrats signed the Club list and one of them declared that he knew of fifteen who would do the same thing That the Union party will carry Grant by a good round majority is conceded by all who are posted In my next I will give you a history of our county finances

The Pain Killer Abroad.

The following correspondence will show something of the estimation in which Perry Davis's Pain Killer is held on the shores of the Mediterranean. It is not surprising that a medicine that receives such testimonials as this from abroad will be well sustained and increasing appreciation at home.

U S CONSULATE Tunis Dec 27, 1865

To the Proprietors of Davis's Pain Killer Providence, R I—Gentlemen—The enclosed has just been received from my friend Tulli late Consul General of Norway and Sweden and of Prussia in this place No comment is needed Truly yours ASIOS PERRY

OZNOL December 16 1865

Dear Sir—Accept thanks for this third supply of Davis's Pain Killer This article has often relieved me of serious illness and will add not to say account consent to be with it both for myself and my family.

I have recommended it to my late colleagues and friends in Tunis and Genoa and at my request one of the largest druggists in this city has sent an order to New York to meet the demand in this place.

Yours truly C A TULIN,

My Love and I.

We never spoke a word of love,
We never owned its name,
As through the leafy wood we drove
The shadowed path we came;
And yet—and yet—I almost think,
Although I can't tell why,
His love is mine, and mine is his,
We're ours—my love and I.

Here let me sit, and live in thought
Those blissful hours again,
And ere I hoard them in my heart
Their sap and sweetness drain.
The bluebells hung their fairy purple heads
Beneath the silver sky,
We talked of trival, common things—
We talked—my love and I.

And once—how well I know the spot—
We stopped beside the brook,
And saw the curgling waters, as
Their sunlit way they took.
My eyes met his, the soul of him
In that brief glance did lie,
My eyelids drooped—we watched the stream
Flow past—my love and I

And now, I've nothing more to say;
My heart won't let me tell
The silent talk our spirits had,
The charm that o'er us fell.
I am not sure, but still I think,
Although I can't tell why,
His love is mine, and mine is his.
We're ours—my love and I.—Argosy.

Who Was She?

A number of eminent public personages have been charged with originating the famous question "Who is she?"—the meaning of which is, that a certain character more or less distinguished never heard of a scrape happening, or a crime committed, or anything calling up of a mischievous nature, without asking "Who is she?" thus stating his belief that a woman was the cause of it all.

While not indorsing this old rogue's assumption, it must be admitted that the ladies have been the means of bringing about some remarkable catastrophes. "Who was Dorvorgilla" in the case of the Feinans? She was Dervorgilla, an Irish lady who was born and brought up before the Plantagenets reigned in England. Sharon Turner says she was the wife of the King of Meath, and the same is supported her by other writers; but Thomas Moore, who ought to have known his story better than them all, and who is generally right, says she was the wife of Tiernan O'Ruare, Lord of Breffny, which is in Connaught. Whatever her husband's rank, she ran away with Dermot Mac-Murrough, King of Leinster, A. D. 1153—or was run away with her, or they ran away together, which is mostly the way of doing it in such cases. This elopement is ordinarily said to be the year 1166, in order the more closely to connect it with Dermot's appeal to Henry II. for aid against the Irish alliance of his own subjects, by which he was overpowered, and compelled to leave Ireland. Dervorgilla was taken from Dermot after his death-throw, but circumstances favor his being then sufficiently punished for his sin; and it does not follow that there was any connection with that crime and his flight. Tiernan O'Ruare commanded the troops that drove Dermot out of Leinster, and forced him to fly to England. Dermot received aid in England under Henry II's patronage; and the head of those who aided him was Strongbow—Richard de Clare, Earl of Pembroke—to whom he gave his daughter in marriage, and secured him the throne of Leinster.

Many of the foreigners who entered Ireland by this arrangement landed in May 1167, and in a little more than a year seven years had elapsed since the beginning of the bloody feuds—a feud that was not finished when it began. Robert Fitzstephen commanded the first party of troops that entered Ireland, Strongbow the next. He was an illegitimate son of Gilbert, Earl of Pembroke, last of the sons of the Conqueror reigned over England, Whether Dervorgilla was driven from his throne and the house of his having taken Dermot home, it is certain that he did take her, that he was the man whose action gave the foreigners into Ireland who were the plagues to her—and so to him through the origin of what is now called the Irish question. How far Dervorgilla was responsible for the evil its difficult to say. Her name was among the early victims of the feud, as he was slain by one of the Fitzgeralds, 1162, and his head sent to England, where it was placed over one of the gates of London, while his body was burned with Dervorgilla. In the latter part of his reign over a part of Meath, which was, perhaps, that Dervorgilla is supposed the Queen of Meath; and was given to De Lacy, one of the invaders, was murdered on suspicion of having come about to hold conference with the Irish. The quarrel thus began has endured for seven generations, and, if it may endure for forty more it will be nothing like in all history, for there never will be anything like it.—Boulder.

The Army of the Republic.

In the address of Gen. John A. Logan to the Army of the Republic, upon assuming the duties of Commander-in-Chief to which he was recently elected. It is of special interest, as it sets forth the noble purposes for which the members of the war have banded themselves together:

HEADQUARTERS, GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC, } Adjutant General's Office, WASHINGTON, Jan. 21, 1868. }

General Orders, No. 1.—Comrades: In accepting the position of Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, to which your representatives assembled in convention at Philadelphia on the 17th instant, elevated me, I assure you of my profound appreciation of the high honor conferred.

It shall be a duty subordinate to no other to secure the trusts thus reposed, that our Order shall attain the pre-eminence to which its object and principle entitle it.

The laws and regulations you have adopted as your guide, contain a declaration of principles, which may well to notice, as setting forth the leading objects of the Grand Army of the Republic, and said to your fundamental law, the relief to be accomplished are:

"The preservation of those kind and fraternal feelings which have bound together with the strong cords of love and affection, the soldiers, sailors and marines who have stood together in the battle, the weary marches, engagements, and marches. The establishment of such just and equitable laws, rules and regulations, as shall be available in works and deeds of honor, of favor, and material aid to its members in all time to come.

"To provide, in such manner, and to such extent as may be within our power, where it is not already provided for by the Government, care, and education of the children of such soldiers, sailors, and marines, and for the support of the widows of the deceased soldiers and marines.

"For the protection and assistance of disabled soldiers, sailors, and marines, whether disabled by wounds, sickness, old age, or misfortune.

"For the establishment and defence of the rights of the late soldiers, sailors and marines of the United States, morally, socially, and politically, with a view to inculcate a proper appreciation of their services to the country, and to a remembrance of such services and claims by the people.

"The maintenance of true allegiance to the United States of America, based upon a paramount respect for, and fidelity to, the National Constitution and laws, manifested by discountenancing whatever may tend to weaken loyalty, incite insurrection, treason, or rebellion, or in any manner impair the efficiency and permanency of our free institutions; together with a defense of those institutions, equal rights, and justice to all men.

"Secured by these objects and principles our Order has been in the past year increased to an extent unexampled in history, and is rapidly spreading over the whole country wherever comrades are to be found in numbers sufficient to establish posts.

It is my earnest hope that the progress made thus far will prove an auspicious precursor of the future.

The plan of our organization is similar to that of the army in which you recently served. The analogies are apparent from the time you enter until you leave your post. The ceremonies through which you pass are not empty forms but have a deep meaning.

All those characteristics which made you good soldiers in war must follow you into the Grand Army of the Republic, to distinguish you there as they did in the camp or on the battle field.

Every comrade should properly estimate his own influence in carrying out the highest aims of our Order, and none can be excused from a proper discharge of his duty under the false impression that his voice or his hand is not needed. You never could have put down the rebellion except by individual effort united, and you cannot now secure the results you seek on any other principle.

Trusting in your hearty co-operation, I hereby assume command of the Grand Army of the Republic.

For greater facility in transacting the business pertaining to the organization, I have established headquarters for the present at Washington, D. C.

All official communications will be addressed to General N. P. Chipman, Adjutant General.

The staff will be announced in future orders, and such suggestions made as may lead to the more complete working of our organization.

Department Commanders will promulgate this order to their respective commands throughout the United States.

The revised regulations and ritual will be forwarded to Department Commanders for distribution at an early day.

Full and complete returns will be sent to the Adjutant General by Department Commanders within thirty days after the receipt of this order.

JOHN A. LOGAN,
Commander-in-Chief.

Official: N. P. CHIPMAN,
Adjutant General.

Some time ago, the Rev. Mr. Spurgeon preached a sermon on the text "And Mary wept." In the midst of earnest eloquence that drew tears from many of those present, in describing the character of the tears shed by Mary over the feet of Jesus, he broke suddenly off, and turning to his congregation, exclaimed. "The tears which Mary shed were not such tears as many of you pour out when you come to this altar. They came from her heart—they were tears of blood—not the poor stuff that you present as an offering to an offended God." Then, leaning over the pulpit, and looking earnestly in the sea of upturned faces, he exclaimed: "There are some of you for whose tears I would not give a farthing a quart."

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press says: "Some amusing incidents are told of the cavalier way in which the Democratic National Committee (Mr. Belmont, Chairman) refused to take any part in the 'quarrel,' as they term it, between the President and Congress. But not one of the committee seemed to be willing to oppose impeachment as a democratic duty and it is generally asserted that when they dined with his Excellency last Saturday, Mr. Belmont cut off all unpleasant discussion by intimating that they came there 'to eat,' and not to talk politics!"

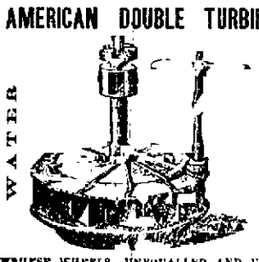
LEFFEL'S
AMERICAN DOUBLE TURBINE



THESE WHEELS, UNEQUALLED AND UNRIVALLED in the United States or the world, have been fully tested on this coast, many being in use at this date, driving all kinds of machinery, Saw Mills, Flour Mills, Quartz Mills, Woolen Factories, &c., &c.

The following is from the Springfield Republic:

Trial of Water Wheels.

Messrs. Jonathan Child and John A. McCreight, who are about establishing mills and factories at Harper's Ferry, Va., wished to possess water wheels, and desiring to make a choice of Spring field Wheels, procured a trial between the Leffel Double-Turbine and the Welch and Burns Wheel. The following report of the Committee shows the result of the trial.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Oct. 17, 1867.

This is to certify, that on the 9th and 10th days of October, 1867, I, in company with Mr. Sinley, Civil Engineer, of Mechanicsburg, carefully measured the amount of water used in the test between the 30 inch Leffel Turbine and the 30 inch Welch & Burns Water wheels, made by Bechtle, Blakeney & Baker, mnfrs at Weimer's mill, near West Milton, Miami Co., O. The contract requiring the tests to be made with ⅔ gates and ⅔ gates, with the same amount of water for each wheel. The amount of grinding was superintended by Mr. Charles Morgan, who built the mill.

The amount of water used in the tests, as measured by myself and Mr. Sinley, is as follows:

	C. ft. per min.
At ⅔ gate the Leffel Wheel used	88.224
" " Welch & Burns used	88.224
At ⅔ gate the Leffel Wheel used	117.528
" " Welch & Burns used	117.528

The grinding was continued for one hour each test.

WILLIAM BROWN,
Civil Engineer.
S. S. STALEY.

Having been chosen by both parties to determine the amount of grain ground by each of the above-mentioned wheels, the result was as follows:

The Leffel Wheel at ⅔ gate ground	256 lbs
The Welch & Burns at ⅔ gate ground	563½ lbs
The Leffel Wheel at ⅔ gate ground	411½ lbs
The Welch & Burns at ⅔ gate ground	1021 lbs

CHARLES MORGAN.

An Enterprising firm of this city have imported a few of the above CHEAP, PEATED-OUT WHEELS. "They GUARANTEE THEM EQUAL TO THE LEFFEL, OR NO PAY."

CAUTION.

To all whom it may concern: I hereby give notice that I will prosecute every infringement on our Patents, whether it is the maker, user, buyer or seller. Every infringement, whether our claims are used in whole or in part, will be prosecuted. A. MYERS.
